NBC's 'The Judge' is gripping

By John Crook

TV DATA FEATURES WRITER

NBC more than makes up for a spotty season of TV movies with "The Judge," a complex and stylish two-part mystery airing at 8 p.m. Sunday and Monday, May 6 and 7.

Based on a best-selling novel by Steve Martini, "The Judge" finds attorney Paul Madriani (Chris Noth) defending an unlikely client: arrogant Judge Armando Acosta (Edward James Olmos), who has been charged with murder relating to a trumped-up bust involving him with a prostitute.

Already wary of representing Acosta, with whom he frequently has clashed in court, Paul is even uneasy to learn that another member of the defense team is former county prosecutor Catherine Rosetti (Lolita Davidovich), an old flame. His misgivings deepen when he learns that Catherine's brother, a shady cop, had been having a steamy affair with the murder victim. Where, exactly, do Catherine's loyalties lie? And how can Paul convince the pompous Judge Acosta that for once, he isn't running the courtroom? And how exactly does Acosta's meekly supportive wife (Sonia Braga) fit into the picture?

"What's interesting about 'The Judge' is that it's many stories in one, and it's many genres tied together," director Mick Garris says. "It's a police thriller and a courtroom drama, but it's also a whodunit and a romance, and they all intertwine equally. All of these elements are just as important as each other, so it takes a broader canvas than just a regular movie would require."

Australian-born Poppy Montgomery portrays the legendary Marilyn Monroe in 'Blonde' at 8 p.m. Sunday and Wednesday on CBS.

'Blonde' examines an icon

By Stephen English

TVDATA FEATURES WRITER

Genius, beauty, fragility, insanity, pain, fear, loneliness and wonder — and, of course, that bleached blond hair — all are on display in Joyce Carol Oates' fictionalized take on Marilyn Monroe.

Making its way to the small screen Sunday and Wednesday, May 13 and 16, the two-part CBS TV movie "Blonde" shows the screen goddess through the eyes of one of America's most perceptive novelists. Oates has said she was striving for the poetic truth of Monroe's life, and she is strikingly successful.

Rising star Poppy Montgomery — whose credits include "Dead Man on Campus," Eddie Murphy's comedy "Life" and a short but well-received stint on the TV series "Relativity" — was faced with the challenge of portraying her lifelong idol.

"Initially, I put a lot of pressure on myself," the 25-year-old confesses. "But when we started shooting, I just had to let go of that if I was going to get anything done. Of course, we were shooting such long hours that I didn't really have the time to worry."

Montgomery admits she couldn't rely too heavily upon her previous study of Monroe's life to play the part.

"People need to remember that this is not a biography of Marilyn Monroe," she says. "In a way, I'm not playing the real person as much as I'm playing Joyce Carol Oates' impressionistic portrait of her."

Hannah Taylor Gordon stars in "Anne Frank," the poignant story of a young German Jew whose diary made her famous at 8 p.m. Sunday and Monday on ABC.

Holocaust revisited

By Jacqueline Cutler

TV DATA FEATURES WRITER

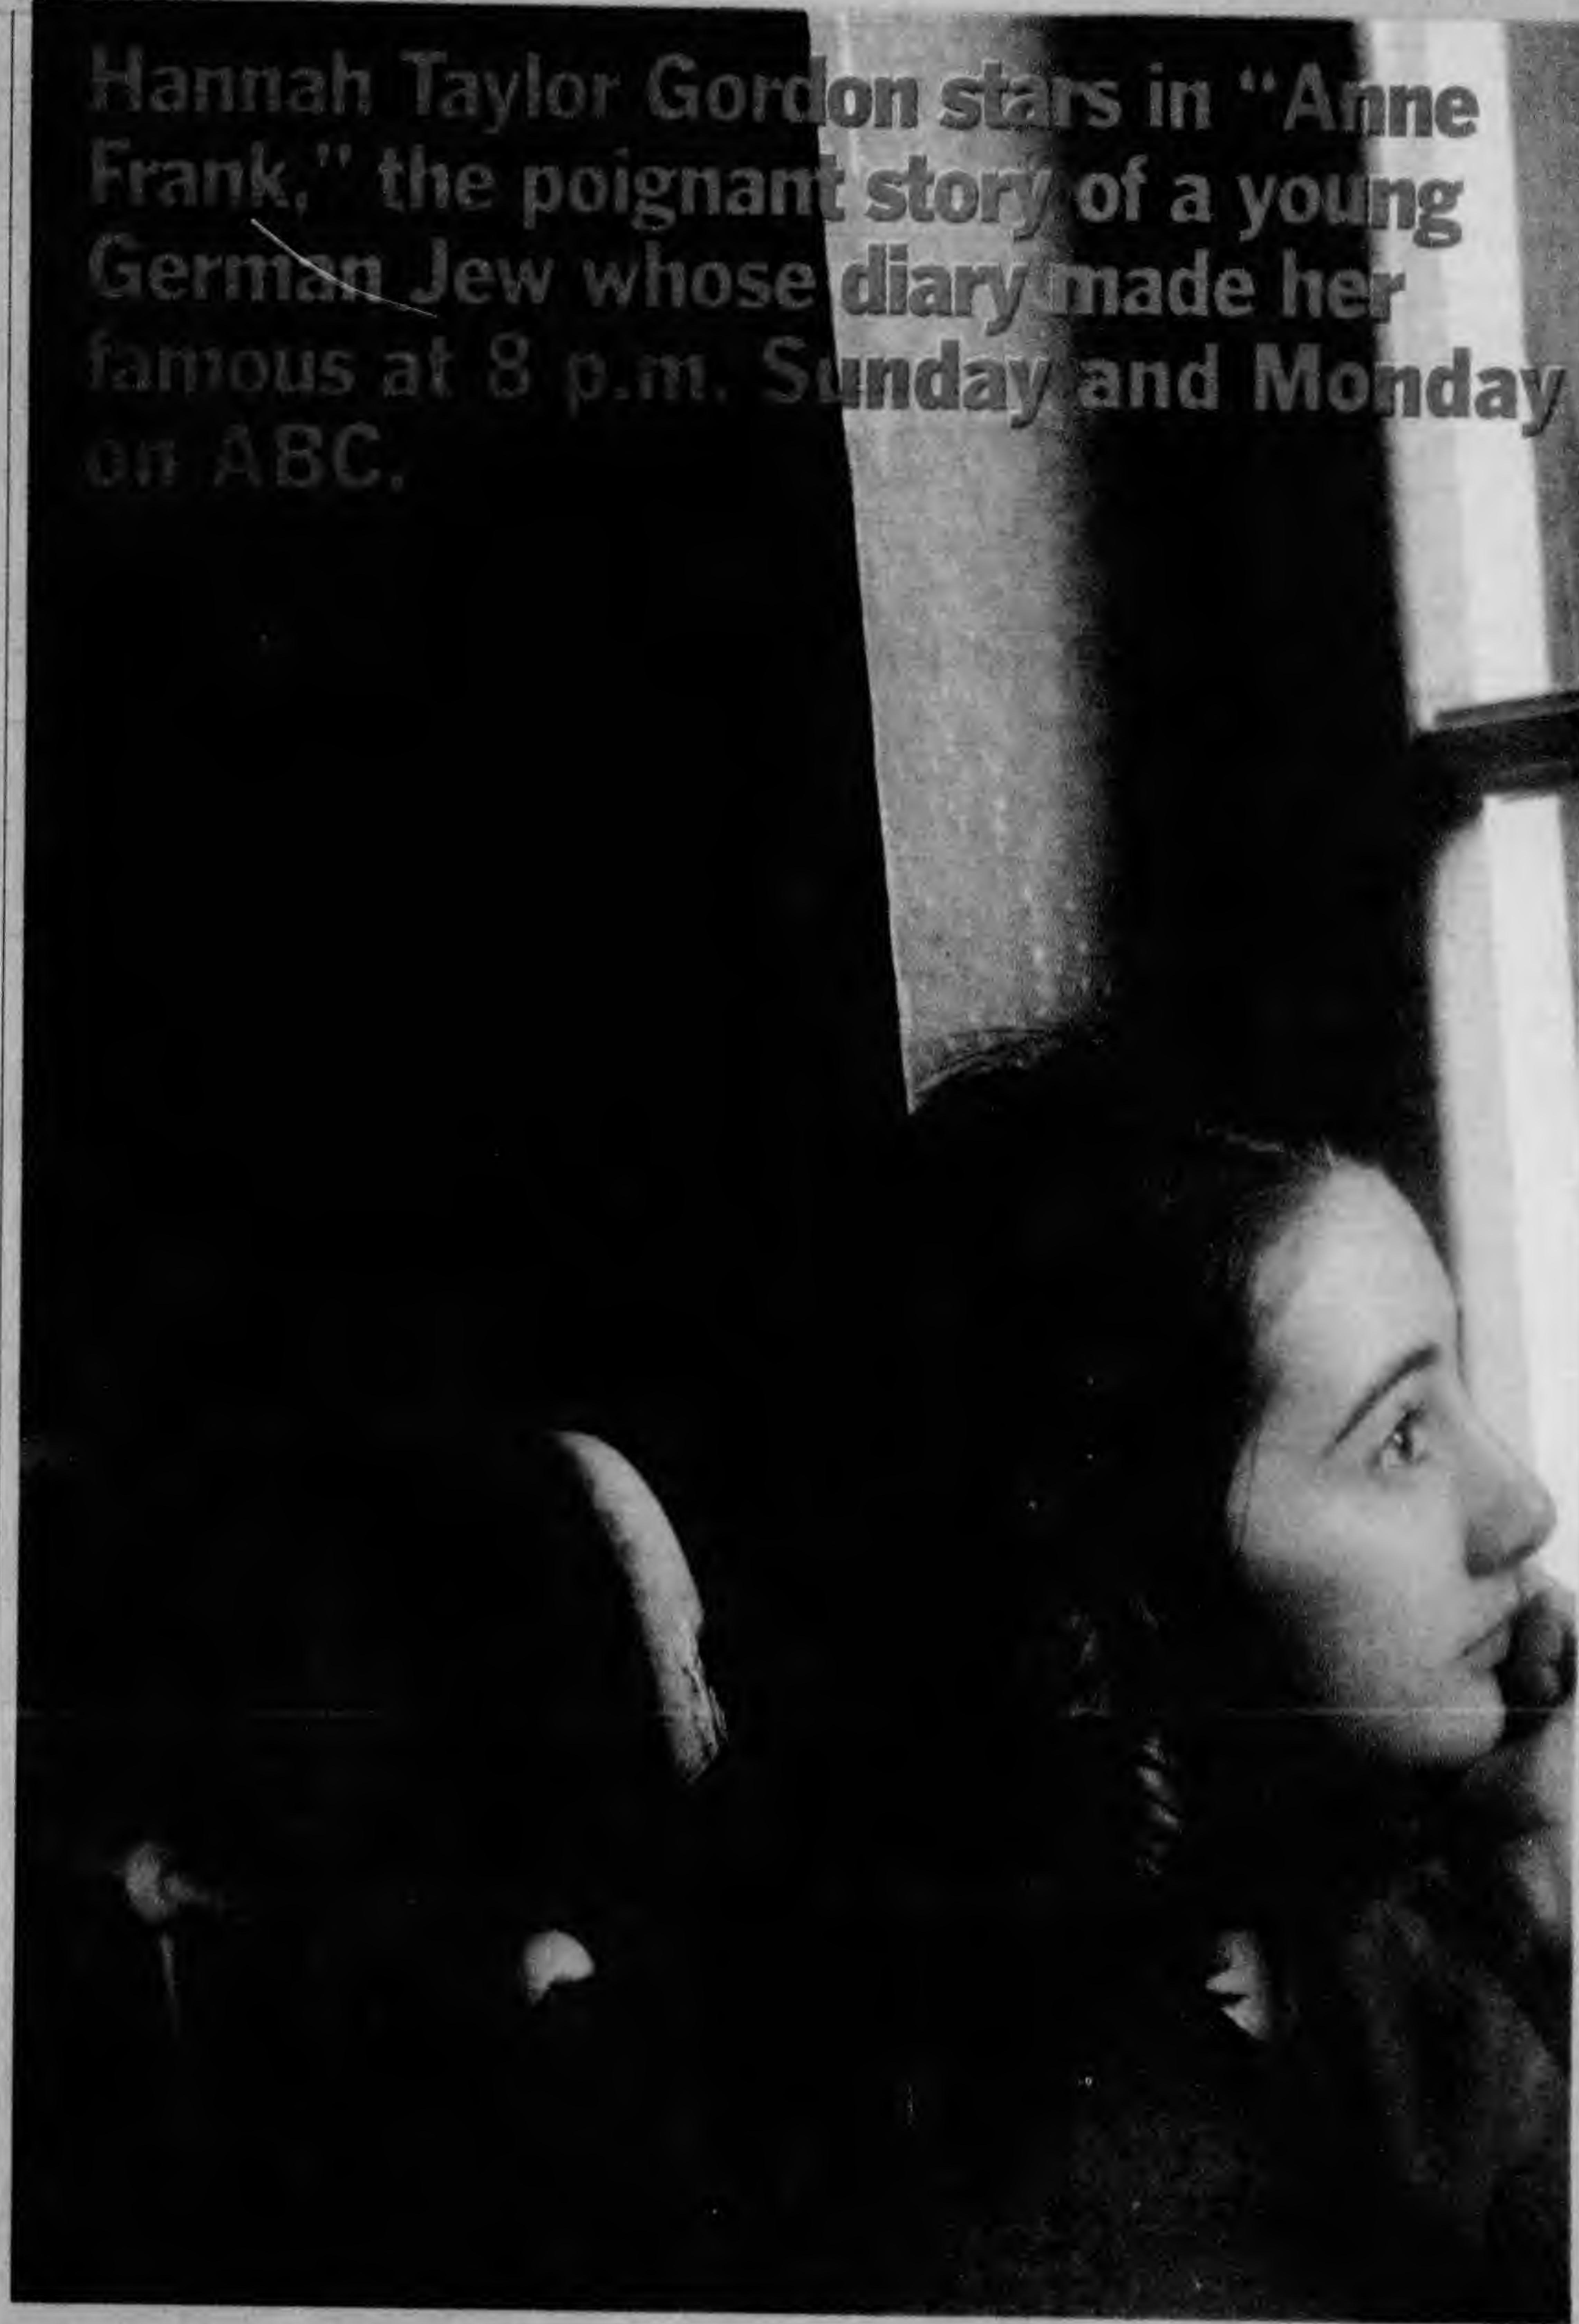

Not that long ago, children were taught to never ask about the numbers they saw tattooed on some people's arms. Their presence served as a reminder of something so awful it was not to be discussed.

Sure, some survivors of the Nazi concentration camps shared their stories. And eventually, more spoke out as bearing witness to torture and murder assumed an urgency in old age.

"Everyone is realizing that this is a very particular moment, and we are going to lose the opportunity if we don't use it now," says Ivy Barsky, deputy director for programming at New York's Museum of Jewish heritage.

And books, movies, plays and television specials continue to unearth Holocaust stories. If schools want to impress upon students the genocide, degradation and lingering pain the Third Reich wrought, there are few better ways than assigning them to watch current TV projects.

Given that "Anne Frank: The Diary of a Young Girl" continues to be assigned reading in schools around the world, "Anne Frank," an ABC movie airing Sunday and Monday, May 20 and 21, is an obvious choice. The diary of the German Jewish girl, who was forced into hiding with her family and four others in an Amsterdam attic, is the second most-read nonfiction book after the Bible. This movie undoubtedly will affect people the way "Schindler's List" did. "Anne Frank" leaves viewers too drained to do much more than turn the TV off when it's over.

Homage paid to heroism

By Stephen English

TVDATA FEATURES WRITER

Pearl Harbor Day comes and goes each year like an abstract December curiosity for many Americans.

NBC's Sunday presentation "Pearl Harbor: Legacy of Attack" is a powerful reminder of what the 1941 surprise assault on a sleepy Hawaiian naval base really meant to America.

Tom Brokaw has dubbed them the "Greatest Generation" — the Americans who jumped from the frying pan of the Great Depression into the fire of World War II after Pearl Harbor was bombed, somehow managing to transform an economically teetering, isolationist nation into a global superpower. The journalist has published three books that pay tribute to the heroes of the World War II era and help to educate their children and grandchildren.

Brokaw also hosts "Pearl Harbor: Legacy of Attack." The program ingeniously interweaves a detailed account of the battle with the moving stories of its survivors. But he downplays his role in reminding society that many American seniors are also American heroes.

"This is not fake anchorman modesty; I really define my role as the doorman," Brokaw says. "I've opened a door and said to a lot of people, 'This way, please.' There's a lot we can learn from these people and from their lives and their values."

If it seems like the media is obsessed with World War II, it's because that war was fought by a quieter generation not given to shouting its pain from the rooftops.
